History

A Storied Past, A Vibrant Future

Built in 1923 as the U.S. Post Office Garage, Asterisk has lived many lives over the past 100 years – each chapter adding to its rich history in Denver. In the 1950s, it became home to the Superior Oil Company as a bustling filling station, followed by U.S. Royal Tires, which affectionately dubbed it "Art Malnati." The 1980s brought new life as the J.W. Brewer Tire Company before transitioning to Weisco Motorcars, adding a touch of automotive flair.

More recently, the building was known as "Junction Box," where Wonderbound, a professional dance studio, turned the space into a creative hub—inviting the community to experience the magic of live art and creative expression.

Following a stunning renovation in 2018-2019, Asterisk has transformed into Denver's premier event venue—hosting spectacular events while also welcoming guests daily at Procession Coffee, an award-winning local boutique coffee shop. From historic roots to modern elegance, Asterisk is where past and future collide in the most exciting way!
